THE GAZETTE.

MONDAY MARCH 7

If people and the newspapers keep on talking, Uncle John Sherman will be the leading man in the republican convention of '88 There is such a thing as Sherman freezing out Blaine.

If the striking printers in Milwaukee find it too cold to go a-fishing, they can go to some secluded spot for serious reflection on the subject of one bird in the hand being worth two in the bush.

The compliments of the democratic Cincinnati Enquirer to Mr. Cleveland: "Indiana democracy seems to suffer much as Cromwell's army did after his death. It is not impossible that one Grover Cleveland is a trifle to blame for it."

Mr. A K. Delaney has now an opportunity to do the state of Wisconsin a kindness, and his party a splendid service. Let him take the Dodge county gang with him to Alaska. The state will wish them a safe journey there, with the hope that they will not return.

The president was afraid to sign the anti Mormon bill, and dared not veto it. So it became a law without his approval. Amelia Folsom was the favorite wife of Brigham Young, and is a relative of Mrs. Cleveland. Mr. Cleveland wears a No. 7 hat and an 18 inch collar. Brigham Young also wore a No. 7 hat and an 18 inch collar. Do you see?

Among the many tender tributes to the late democratic congress, none is more touching than the following from the Charleston (South Carolina) News and Courier, which is democratic: "The members of that body have wasted most of their time in discussing unimportant measures, or in leading raids against the treasury, while the real work of the session has been neglected and the interests of the people have been shamelessly abused."

Governor Hill has a boom of considerable size for the presidential nomination. All the "old reliable" democrats are for him, because he is not tainted with the undemocratic doctrine of giving offices to mugwumps. On this point the Chicago Times remarks: "Mr. Blaine, whose hand is always active in politics, has not yet been credited with encouraging the Hill boom. But there is nothing now in politics that he should more warmly favor or more persistently urge along. Hill is the one democrat of all others whose nomination would be most certain to repel the independent republicans and elect Blaine. The men that want Blaine are industriously booming Hill."

One of the strongest democratic papers in Missouri is the St. Louis Republican. But it is not too democratic to kick over the traces in this fashion: "The appointment of James M. Trotter to be recorder of deeds in the District of Columbia is open to the same objection that was urged with good reason in the Matthews case. Mr. Trotter is a resident of Massachusetts, and his appointment to a local office in Washington is a departure from the democratic platform. If all appointments were so made there could be no local self government, and the selection made in this case is only defensible on the ground that no resident of the district who will accept the office is competent to fill it."

GOLD AND SILVER.

The net product of gold and silver of the United States for the past sixteen years, has been ascertained by Wells, Fargo& Co., of New York. It is an interesting table and is well worth preserving:

Year.	Gold.	Silver.
1870	$47,320,000	$33,750,000
1871	19,280,000	31,200,000
1872	10,021,120	35,177,300
1873	27,453,362	30,236,758
1874	20,000,122	34,493,488
1875	31,035,230	30,068,101
1876	39,202,924	32,880,957
1877	45,810,160	31,880,252
1878	38,219,127	37,576,009
1879	37,032,857	31,470,252
1880	38,068,075	32,550,067
1881	42,387,613	30,059,809
1882	48,133,039	29,011,318
1883	32,075,101	27,849,000
1884	43,220,625	25,885,567
1885	41,316,500	27,366,758
1886	52,139,351	29,501,424

The yield of silver has not materially increased in the past year, while the product of gold is larger than it has been in the past twenty years. The largest product of gold ever known in any one year in the United States was in 1853, when the product was estimated as $65,000,000. It was $60,000,000 in 1852, and also $60,000,000 in 1854. The increase in the supply of the precious metals during the past two years, is the result in a large degree, to the extension of railway facilities to the mining camps of the distant states and territories.

The product of copper and lead has not been very great, the gross yield of both being only a little over $18,000,000.

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT.

Mr. Hans S. Grinde, of Dane county, introduced a bill in the assembly some time ago, which enables the qualified voters of every county, or town, village or city, in the state to determine by ballot whether liquor shall be sold therein. The first section provides that it shall be the duty of the county judge of any county in this state, upon the written petition of 100 qualified voters of the county, asking that the question may be submitted to them whether or not any spirituous, malt or intoxicating liquors or drinks shall be allowed to be sold within the said county, to order an election to be held to decide whether or not the sale of such spirituous, malt, ardent or intoxicating liquors or drinks shall be prohibited.

The second section of the bill then provides:

It shall be the duty of said county judge within ten days after the filing of said petition, to issue an order, for the holding of said election, upon a day not less than thirty nor more than forty days from the date of said order, which order shall be published for three consecutive weeks in at least three newspapers, if so many there be, published in said county. If there be not three newspapers published in said county, then besides publishing said order in as many newspapers as are published in said county, notices of said election shall be posted up in at least three conspicuous places in every town, village and city within said county; and it shall be the duty of the town, village or city clerk to see to the posting up of said notices. Said election shall not be held within sixty days of the general fall election.

Another section, making it the duty of the district attorneys, mayors of cities, justices of the peace and members of town and village boards to see that the provisions of the law are rigidly enforced, constitute the chief features of the bill.

The Hon. James Sutherland, who is taking a deep interest in the local option movement, has suggested to Mr. Grinde some amendments that are of vital importance, and in brief are these: The bill should distinctly specify the judge who is to order the election, as in some counties there is a judge of probate and a municipal judge. The bill should also have a section which imposes proper penalties for any or all violations of the law; or should at least impose penalties for violating existing laws which regulate the sale of liquors.

Then, again, as the bill now stands, it would be inoperative in villages and cities governed by special charters. It should provide that all such charters are suspended so far as any of their provisions conflict with this act, but for no other purpose.

Again, the tax or license in the state should be increased to $500 in cities of of 10,000 or less, and for cities of over 10,000 the license should be $1,000. Mr Sutherland is doing some excellent missionary work for the bill by having petitions sent in large numbers to Madison, asking for its passage. It is hoped that the legislature will pass the bill. It is a splendid temperance reform measure and should become a law.

A DEMOCRATIC WAIL.

During the campaign of 1884 democratic newspapers and speakers made a great howl about "republican extravagance and fraud and jobbery," and promised to stop the extravagance and unearth the fraud and jobbery. Two years of the democratic administration have passed, and the question will naturally be asked, "what has the democratic party done toward stopping extravagance and unearthing republican fraud and jobbery?"

The best witness one can put on the stand to answer the question, is a democratic newspaper, which has to-day the largest circulation of any paper in New York city, the World. A republican witness would be incompetent from a democratic point of view on account of prejudice, and therefore the Gazette will take the New York World, whose testimony can not be rejected on that ground.

In the impression of that paper of last Saturday, it begins a leading editorial as follows:

We have shown that the result of the first two years of the democratic administration has not been, in a large way, beneficial to the country. What has been its effect upon the democratic party? Has the party carried out its pledges? Have its voters been satisfied with the results thus far achieved? Is the party strengthened in consequence of the policy pursued by the president and by the action of congress?

These are some very sober questions for this reform administration to answer. Will any one connected with the government at Washington answer them? Not one. The World then gives a very fair picture of the condition of things in its own party:

Taking the condition of last year as a test the democrats appear to have been weakened rather than strengthened. They lost more than thirty of their majority in the house of representatives, and they lost the important states of Indiana and Virginia. The decline of party discipline and unity is likewise marked. The sectorial election wrangles in several states and the divisions within the party line in congress are proofs of this. Indifference to party obligations in the president has bred indifference among the voters and the local leaders. The party has not, at present time, either united enthusiasm for a leader or the harmonious devotion to a policy of government necessary to insure a great and determined national canvass.

It is true that the party has lost ground ever since March 4, 1885. It has not gained a single point in the two years Mr. Cleveland has been in Washington. He has not only lost the support of many of the pary leaders, but the great newspapers of the party have been compelled to publish severe criticisms of the acts of the democratic administration. Why is this? The answer will be found, in part, in the following paragraph from the World:

If the first half of the administration has not been as bad as the republicans predicted, it has not been quite as good, in the sense of being fruitful in results, as the democrats expected. The campaign of 1884 was fought upon sharply defined issues. The democrats demanded a "change in policy, in measures and in men." They affirmed that "the frauds and jobbery in every department of the government" called for reform. They pointed to "a surplus of more than $100,000,000 a year collected yearly from suffering people" as indicating the need of a change. And they pledged themselves to "purify the administration from corruption, to restore economy, and to reduce taxation to the lowest limit consistent with the preservation of the faith of the nation.

Then comes the answer direct from the World, and it is enough to make sober-minded democrats stagger with shame:

How few of these things have been done! No "fraud and jobbery" have been uncovered by the administration though not for the reason, as millions of democrats believe, that such things do not exist. If the surplus had been reduced it has been by squandering the revenues, not by abating taxation. Is it any wonder that there is disappointment and dissatisfaction in the party?

The New York World is not alone in these criticisms. They come from the most influential democratic papers in the country, and hence they have a significance that compel thoughtful men to seriously ponder.

AFTER THE SESSION.

ITEMS PICKED UP ABOUT THE DESERTED NATIONAL CAPITAL.

A 60,000,000-Acre Land Item That Don't Go—Important Election in Rhode Island—No Hope for the River and Harbor Bill—The Commerce Commissioners—Why It Was Shelved.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 7.—Commissioner Sparks, of the general land office, Saturday addressed a letter to Mr. John E. Owens, of Brooklyn, N. Y., in answer to an inquiry about a New York syndicate getting possession of an immense tract of public land. The commissioner in his letter says:

Upon receipt of your letter of the 3d inst. inquiring how a New York syndicate can get possession of 60,000,000 acres of public land. I infer that your inquiry relates to a newspaper paragraph recently published stating that a syndicate had purchased an alleged private land claim embracing an enormous quantity of land including portions of Texas, Kansas, the Indian territory, New Mexico and Colorado. I have to advise you that no possession has been acquired by any person or persons of 60,000,000, or any other number of acres of land under the alleged claim, and that the records of this office disclose no foundation for a legitimate claim of this character. No person has any legal right to attempt to control or dispose of public lands of the United States upon the pretext of such a claim. Persons who purchase a "quit claim deed" from claimants of alleged private land grants, do so at their own risk.

A JOURNALIST'S CONTRIBUTION

To the Implements of Destruction—Neely's Rotatory "Sea-Devil."

WASHINGTON CITY, March 7.—The local papers give elaborate descriptions of the invention by Mr. Sid H. Neely, a young journalist of Washington, of a "sea-devil," or sub-marine torpedo, capable of carrying a charge of nearly 1,000 pounds of dynamite. It is to be sent after an enemy's ship from either shore or shipboard, and its inventor asserts that no ship, however fast, can run away from it, even in a stern chase.

The body of the torpedo, carrying the charge, revolves with tremendous rapidity, the shaft in the rear being held motionless, first by a float to which the torpedo is attached, and afterwards by four flat blades that stick out from the shaft like so many wings of a churn paddle. Reaching the guards of a ship, the torpedo ducks its head, dives fourteen feet into the water, raises its head and darts against the ship's hull. It is steered until it reaches the ship by electric wires, but the most accurate shots can be made with it a distance of three quarters of a mile. Mr. Neely will soon give an exhibition of his "sea-devil."

LITTLE RHODY'S IMPORTANCE.

A Congressional Election That a Good Deal May Depend Upon.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 7.—The most important election of the present year is to be held in the Second congressional district of Rhode Island on the 6th of April, where a vacancy exists. At the recent special election, growing out of the contest between Pirce and Page, the latter was chosen only for the few remaining days of the session which expired Friday. The April election will be important, because it may materially affect the relative political standing of the states. In the Fiftieth congress, by present returns, the Republicans have nineteen and the Democrats seventeen of the state delegations, while New Hampshire is a tie. Should a Republican congressman be elected to succeed Page in Rhode Island, the Republicans will thus be given a clear majority of the states, or twenty out of the thirty-eight votes, enough for a choice in case the election of a president is thrown into the house. Should a Democrat be elected, it would simply increase the Democratic delegations to eighteen, and leave the Republican delegations at nineteen.

Senator Beck's Wife Dead.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 7.—Mrs. Senator Beck died at 7 o'clock Sunday evening of epilepsy. She has been in ill-health for a number of years, but her sudden death was not anticipated. Mrs. Beck was a Miss Buckner, of Loudon county, Va., and she was a few years older than Senator Beck, who is 67. She was a lady of high intellectual force and most loveable character, and Senator Beck's prominence is said to have been largely owing to her well-directed assistance. She leaves two children—Mrs. Goodloe, wife of Maj. Goodloe, paymaster of the marine corps, and George Beck, a large ranch proprietor in Wyoming. A daughter who married James Corcoran, nephew of the millionaire banker, died a few years since in Arkansas, where her husband resided.

All the Same the President Won't Sign.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 7.—Since the adjournment of congress the president has been urged to sign the river and harbor appropriation bill, as well as other bills that passed both houses just prior to adjournment. Those who favor such action have been looking up the law and assert that there is nothing in the constitution compelling the president to sign these bills (if he wished them to become laws) before 12 o'clock on the 4th of March, and to report the fact of his endorsement to congress. There is good authority for stating, however, that the president will not sign any of the bills that were not signed before adjournment, and that the river and harbor bill is dead.

Going to Have a High Old Time.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 7.—On Tuesday a party of senators, consisting of Sherman, Manderson, Palmer and others will leave Washington en route for Florida, on a pleasure trip. Arrangements have been made with Superintendent Barry, of the Pullman Palace-Car company, to furnish a modern car for the use of the party during their absence. Before returning a trip to Cuba is contemplated. Gen. Anson McCook, secretary of the senate, and Col. Canaday, sergeant at arms, will accompany the party. They will be on the road upward of two weeks. On the return trip Senator Sherman expects to deliver a speech at Nashville, Tenn.

The President Has a Little List.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 7.—Latest inquiries about the personnel of the inter-state commerce commission lead to the impression that there are still before the president eight or nine names from which the five commissioners will be chosen during the next fortnight. It is understood that no formal tender or acceptance has been made in any instance. The president's method has been to inquire indirectly, through mutual acquaintances, whether eligible persons would be likely to accept if appointments were tendered, and by the answers to such inquiries he has gradually formed a little list without committing himself.

Why One Bill Was Pocketed.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 7. — The "pocket" veto of the bill inhibiting the employment of convict labor or use of any material produced by convict labor in the construction of federal buildings or other public works was consequent upon a clause which likewise forbade the employment of any alien or person who had not declared his intention to become a citizen. It would have been too late to amend the bill by striking out the latter clause, and while the provision against convict labor was not objected to, the president thought the alien prohibition went further than American traditions and customs permitted.

The Texas Inquiry.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 7.—The investigation of the Texas bulldozing case was concluded Saturday by the senate committee. Five witnesses were called in rebuttal by the memorialists and they all flatly contradicted the statements of the Democratic witnesses as to the populations of the men alleged to have been driven from their homes. J. E. Slater, telegraph operator at Brenham, Tex., was examined regarding a telegram said to have been sent by Judge Kirk to Dowaeo Bolton (who was killed) on election day telling Bolton: "Things look mighty bad; get in your work," but Slater declined to tell anything about it and to answer questions. The committee adjourned sine die."

Will Try it Again Next Session.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 7.—Congressman Henderson, champion of Mrs. Logan's pension bill in the house, says the bill will be reintroduced next winter, and that it will be passed. He says it will get through the senate quite as easily as it did before, and that the next house will be afraid to reject it, fearing the opposition of the soldier vote in the presidential campaign immediately following the adjournment of congress.

PLUNGED INTO A FLOOD.

A RAILWAY DISASTER THAT WAS A VERY CLOSE CALL.

For a Case of Wholesale Drowning—A Sudden Flood Weakens a Trestle and Lets a Car-Load of Passengers into the Water—Only Two Lives Lost—Terrible Pit Catastrophe.

ST. LOUIS, MO., March 7.—The south-bound Texas express on the Iron Mountain railroad ran into a washed-out trestle a few miles north of DeSoto, Mo., about midnight Saturday. The train consisted of two baggage, one express, one smoking car, two first class coaches and four sleepers, and carried in all 120 passengers. The Memphis express had preceded the unlucky train only a half hour previous and passed over it safely. The train which went through the trestle was running at the usual rate of speed and there was no warning of the near approach to danger. The structure gave way under the weight of the train and the engine, tender, two baggage cars, express car and smoker plunged downward into the roaring flood beneath.

The storm had been sudden and heavy and the waters came down the hills into the creek almost as if they were a released torrent from a reservoir. The volume of water had wonderfully increased within the few minutes intervening between the passage of the two trains. The smoker had in it about thirty passengers, who found themselves precipitated into the rushing water. The scene is described as a horrible one, men were clinging for their lives to trees all over the submerged bottom, the horror of the wreck being supplemented by that of danger of wholesale drowning. A relief train went out from the city and the work of rescue was at once begun. Many men were rescued from small tree tops to which they had clung for hours.

Engineer Kelly and Fireman Hach went down with the engine and were submerged in the flood. Kelly, in his struggle to free himself, found that one of his feet was held fast, but at the same instant and just as he realized that he must drown, the engine turned over, his foot was released, and he came to the surface. Seizing a passing log, he clung to it desperately, and was swept down the torrent and lodged against a tree 150 yards below. With scarcely strength enough to move he clasp his legs and arms around the limb of a tree, became unconscious, and was not restored until five or three hours afterward. He had been taken from the tree and kindly cared for in a house in Victoria.

The killed so far as reported are as follows: David Byron, a machinist of DeSoto, Mo., and Samuel Meyer, brakeman on the road. Besides those there were nine persons more or less seriously injured.

ANOTHER FRIGHTFUL DISASTER

Nearly One Hundred and Fifty Men Suffocated in a Mine.

BRUSSELS, March 7.—An explosion of fire damp occurred Saturday in a colliery at Quaregnon, four miles from Mons. The explosion shattered the roofs and galleries so that many of them fell. Rescuers have penetrated the galleries and found 104 dead from suffocation.

Snow-Plow Train Overwhelmed.

WINNIPEG, Man., March 7.—Intelligence of a serious accident from a snow slide in the Rockies has just been received here. Last Thursday a slow slide in the Selkirk range struck a snow-plow train, carrying it down an immense gorge and completely burying it. When dug out, seven hours after, Superintendent William Green and six men, all employes, were smothered to death. Two of the men were named Ryan and Spark. The Canadian Pacific officials refuse to give particulars, and are making special efforts to keep the accident quiet.

New York Weekly Burned Out.

NEW YORK, March 7.—At 4:30 Saturday afternoon a fire started on the ground floor of the five-story building, 29 Rose street, occupied by Sweet & Smith, publishers and owners of The New York Weekly. The whole of the fire department from the lower portion of the city was called out, but despite the firemen's exertions, in less than an hour the entire building and contents was a mass of ruins. The total loss is estimated at $150,000, fully insured.

Given Up as Lost.

PHILADELPHIA, March 7.—The Italian bark Carlott, hence for Queenstown, eighty-eight days out, with a cargo of wheat valued at $20,000, and a crew of twelve men, has been given up as lost.

The Hawk Got Left.

Two little boys that I happen to know of managed to get hold of three or four pairs of squabs about fifteen months ago, and now they have a flock of about eighty pigeons. A hungry hawk managed to slip up on the pigeons one morning. Singling out Brownie, he made a dart for the veteran. Brownie flew directly at the window of the little boys' room, followed by the hawk. At the window the pigeon made a turn of indescribable swiftness and the hawk went crashing through a window pane. It so happened that a caged mocking bird was hanging in the room, and the sudden appearance of the hawk caused Dick to give utterance to shrieks that could be heard a quarter of a mile. The hawk, nothing dazed by his experience, made an effort to get at the bird and mounted the cage for that purpose. Dick fell on the floor of his wire parlor and made the house resound with his shrill cries. Then the little boys appeared on the scene and they soon put an end to the hawk.—Atlanta Constitution.

At a Washington Reception.

At a Washington reception the other day, after Miss Duke, whose mother is a sister of the Confederate general, John Morgan, had played the violin, Miss Scott was asked to recite and chose a poem describing Morgan's raid in Ohio, not knowing that the raider's niece was listening to the not very complimentary verses about her uncle.—New York Sun.

Kate Field's Nervousness.

With all Miss Field's experience she is very nervous before appearing in public, and conducts herself for an hour beforehand as whimsically and irrationally as would a school girl on the occasion of her graduating essay.—New York Graphic.

BEECHER, THE GREAT PASTOR, LIES WAITING THE LAST SUMMONS.

His Career Suddenly Brought to Its End by an Attack of the Fatal Paralysis.

An Apparently Slight Illness Rapidly Develops Into the Clutch of Death—The Stricken Preacher Lying Unconscious While His Loved Ones Watch for the Breaking of the Golden Cord—How the News Is Received at Home and Abroad.

CHICAGO, March 7.—3 a. m.—Up to this hour no report has been received from Mr. Beecher. Dr. Hammond said: "Mr. Beecher will never be conscious again. There is absolutely no hope. He may die in two hours and he may last a couple of days longer, but death is certain. The paralysis of the entire left side is now complete. Nothing rouses him. He lies in a state of coma, but suffers no pain—at least is conscious of none. The patient is now merely a breathing-machine. Practically he is a dead man."

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 7.—All day Saturday Rev. Henry Ward Beecher was lying in a comatose state at his home in this city, the result of an apoplectic fit which attacked him early Friday morning last. The family has been very reticent regarding the cause of Mr. Beecher's illness, and it was not generally known until Saturday. Saturday night Mr. Beecher was in a critical condition and his death expected before the morning. Drs. Hammond and Searle were in attendance and both regarded Mr. Beecher's condition as critical. They were of the opinion that Sunday or Monday morning would decide whether the Plymouth pastor should die or become a physical wreck. Col. Beecher said that while he thought there would be no change in a few hours at least, the family had been warned by the physicians to prepare for the worst.

The family's account of Mr. Beecher's attack as given out Saturday is as follows: Between 2 and 3 o'clock on Friday morning he awoke his wife and complained of feeling ill. She arose to get him a drink of something, but before she could do so he commenced vomiting. She thought nothing of the attack, supposing that he had eaten something which had disagreed with him, or that he was suffering from biliousness. The fit of vomiting lasted some time, and when it had passed Mr. Beecher laid back on his pillow quite exhausted. In a short time he fell asleep and Mrs. Beecher concluded that he would be better in a few hours. When he did not come down to breakfast his wife became alarmed, and calling Col. Beecher and her daughter-in-law they went to Mr. Beecher's room. They found him lying awake in bed, very pale, but unable to utter a word. He made an effort to rise, but fell back again powerless. To anxious questions from his wife and son as to how he felt he could make but a few inarticulate sounds, and the now thoroughly frightened family sent in haste for medical aid.

On Thursday Mr. Beecher ate a few clams for supper, and after some literary work retired somewhat before his usual hour. When he awoke his wife with a complaint of a severe pain in his head Mrs. Beecher was surprised. Headache for the reverend gentleman was an anomaly, as he had never before been known to have one. Mrs. Beecher bathed his head and did everything else she could for him, but so little did she think that his illness was anything but slight that a doctor was not sent for until afternoon.

Mr. Beecher's family physician, Dr. W. S. Searle, arrived in a short time and made a hasty examination. He said that Mr. Beecher was quite ill, but did not think there was any immediate danger. He prescribed some remedies, and during the day noted every change in the patient's condition. Saturday morning Mr. Beecher appeared to be worse, and it was decided to call Dr. W. A. Hammond, of New York, for consultation with Dr. Searle. The immediate relatives of Mr. Beecher were telegraphed for, including his son, who is in the west, another son, who is in San Francisco, and Mrs. Scofield, his daughter. Col. Beecher also sent a telegram to his son at Yale college.

Before noon Mr. Beecher lapsed into unconsciousness, and was in that condition when Dr. Hammond entered the house. Dr. Hammond said that Mr. Beecher was in a critical condition, yet as he was a strong man he might rally. He gave the family all the hope he could, and it was after 2 o'clock when he went away.

During the examination made by Drs. Hamilton and Searle it was found that the paralysis had extended down the left side to the limb, though the arm was more affected than any other part. This member had become useless. The symptoms of apoplexy had increased, and both doctors agreed that there were nine chances to one against the Plymouth pastor's recovering from the effect of the double stroke that had visited him. By 8 o'clock Saturday night, the news having got abroad, the street in front of Mr. Beecher's residence was blocked with men, women and children eager to read the bulletins which were placed on the door at short intervals giving the condition of the patient. There was no material change during the night except that the watchers thought Mr. Beecher's mind got slightly clearer.

When Dr. Searle paid his first visit Friday morning he found the sick man in a sort of stupor, easily aroused him and said to him:

"You have slept so long, Mr. Beecher, that your family have been somewhat worried on your account."

"Yes," replied Mr. Beecher; "I've been dreaming. I dreamed that I had been made a duke, and that Mrs. Beecher had been made a duchess. I also dreamed that we had come into possession of a certain amount of property, and we were trying to figure out an income. The income was invested in British consols. You know, doctor," continued Mr. Beecher, with a slight smile, "that arithmetic has always been a source of great trouble to me."

The idea that he would die at his work always seemed strong in Mr. Beecher, and also pleasant for him to contemplate. He prided himself on his excellent health. "I have an old engine of a heart here," he said recently to a friend, placing his hand on his breast, "that drives the blood through every corner of my body with a force that brooks no opposition, and I pity anything that gets into my stomach. I think I could digest a brickbat. It seems to me I never knew what an attack of dyspepsia or indigestion meant." His only physical bane seemed to be hay fever. This his been his thorn in the flesh for years, and drove him away to the mountains as regularly as the summer came.

At 4 o'clock Sunday morning there seemed to be a change for the worse and all the family were summoned. Breathing almost ceased and dissolution seemed near. The patient was wholly unconscious, but half an hour later a rally took place. At 10 o'clock another alarming relapse occurred. Maj. Pond took a carriage and hastened to Dr. Hammond's office in New York. The doctor was so engaged that he could not leave and sent a request to Dr. Tod Helmuth to go to his stead and wait until he came. Dr. Helmuth assented and drove back with Maj. Pond and at 11 a. m. a bulletin was issued to the effect that Mr. Beecher was gradually failing. He might, however, live for several days. By this time there was a crowd of several hundred persons around the house, who pressed eagerly forward to scan the bulletin. Then some of them moved sadly away to the church a short distance from the house and listened to the mournful service which only served to remind them more forcibly of him who had been stricken from the pulpit he had occupied so long.

An hour or so later, Dr. Hammond arrived at the house and consulted with Drs. Searle and Helmuth and a bulletin was issued, saying that death was considered certain, but would probably not occur Sunday.

The anxiety of hundreds of citizens of Brooklyn to learn the condition of the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher led them to visit the residence of his son, Col. Henry Beecher, at Clark and Hicks street, at an early hour Sunday morning. Only the immediate friends were admitted, but as soon as any emerged from the dwelling where the great preacher was lying at the point of death, they were eagerly questioned by the throng who surrounded the house. They had no word of encouragement in regard to his condition.

At 2:30 p. m. Sunday another bulletin was issued which stated that there was no change, and no sign of consciousness, but that death would probably not occur Sunday. Mr. Thomas G. Shearman, and other immediate friends of the family were admitted to the sick room during the day, and one after another emerged with eyes filled with tears. In the afternoon it required the services of two policemen to keep the steps to the dwelling from being blocked completely by the crowd. Dr. Searle made another call upon Mr. Beecher about 5 o'clock, and said that he thought he was breathing easier, and he did not look for immediate dissolution. It was his opinion that Mr. Beecher would live until Monday morning.

Shortly after the services held at the church, which consisted only of the administration of the sacrament by the Revs. Messrs. Powell and Halliday, a meeting of the officers of the church was held for the purpose of taking whatever action might be deemed necessary in the event of Mr. Beecher's death. Mr. Henry L. Pratt, who presided, appointed as a committee John S. Howard, who is one of the oldest members of the church; Augustus Storrs, S. V. White, Thomas J. Sidney, and Rossiter W. Raymond. The meeting then adjourned.

Nearly all the pastors in Brooklyn made reference in their sermons Sunday morning to the sudden illness which had befallen the distinguished clergyman, so widely known and revered.

At 10 o'clock Sunday evening Mr. Beecher's condition was practically unchanged. Dr. Searle, previous to his going to Mr. Beecher's house, where he remained for the night, issued a statement to that effect stating that the pastor was in a deeply comatose state from which he would probably never rally. The body and extremities were equally warm. The face was flushed and had a somewhat livid hue. He was unable to speak or to swallow anything except small quantities of liquid, and these must be carefully administered to prevent choking. During the day he was under the constant supervision of his physician, who remained with him during the night. Drs. W. T. Helmuth and W. A. Hammond, of New York city, each visited him once during the day. All these medical advisers were in full and active accord as to the nature and location of the disease. It was their opinion that the history of Sunday confirmed the opinion they had entertained from the beginning, viz.: that recovery was not to be hoped for; that though the effusion of blood into the brain had been stopped, a fresh hemorrhage might at any time occur and speedily end life; that this was not likely to happen immediately, and should it not occur his life may yet be spared for several days; how long depends upon his endurance and strength of constitution.

Among the hundreds of Mr. Beecher's personal friends who sought admission to the house during the day were noticed many of the leading citizens of New York and Brooklyn. Noticeable among the callers was the venerable deacon John T. Howard, one of the founders of Plymouth church and one of three trustees who signed the call in 1847 which brought Mr. Beecher from Indianapolis to this city. Deacon Howard was the only one outside of the family admitted to Mr. Beecher's bedside. He was broken down by emotion. Mrs. Beecher is utterly worn out. She is a year older than Mr. Beecher and is feeble at best. Dr. Edward Beecher, brother of the dying man, was at the house Sunday evening.

Dr. Hammond was seen late Sunday night and said Mr. Beecher was beyond all human aid; his family understood that and death might be looked for at any time. Dr. Searle was seen at 9 o'clock and said that he believed Mr. Beecher would die before morning.

No sermon was preached at Mr. Beecher's church Sunday morning, but a beautiful and impressive service took its place. The church was well filled. Rev. Dr. Powell, secretary of the Home Missionary society, conducted the service, assisted by Rev. S. B. Halliday, Mr. Beecher's white-haired assistant. Dr. Powell prayed for the congregation in the deep affliction that had come upon them. Then the venerable Dr. Halliday rose and with trembling voice said: "It seems fit that we omit the regular service and celebrate only the communion. I think your hearts will readily respond to the change in the service." Tears streamed down his cheeks as he added that a few moments before the condition of Mr. Beecher had been pronounced hopeless. Sobs were heard from all parts of the church, and handkerchiefs were applied to the eyes of every woman and many of the men present. Several new members were received into the church, being baptized by Mr. Halliday, and the communion sacrament was observed. This, with reading of the service and the singing of one of Mr. Beecher's favorite hymns, ended the morning meeting. A more mournful occasion was never witnessed. All seemed to feel a sense of personal bereavement, almost of despair.

Mr. Halliday announced that a service of prayer would be held in the evening, as many of Beechers friends would be in the vicinity and that would be the best means of informing them of his condition. Before dismissing the congregation Mr. Halliday said it seemed appropriate at this time to read an extract from their pastor's writings. He read this sentence: "When we have passed into the twilight of life, and our sun seems to be setting, let us call back, 'I live.'"

As the people slowly left the church, the organist played, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth."

At the service of prayer in Plymouth church in the evening there was a repetition of the sad scenes of the morning meeting. Mr. Beecher's old friends prayed and talked about their dying brother and pastor. Among those who partook of the exchange of reminiscence and condolence were Dr. Halliday, Professor Rossiter Raymond, Dr. Edward Beecher, Deacon S. V. White, Thomas S. G. Shearman and Rev. Lyman Abbott.

A near friend of Mr. Beecher says that the property left by him will not exceed in value $125,000, though his income for a score of years has been $30,000 per annum. He gave freely in all sorts of charities, and the only self-indulgence for which he was noted was in the collection of curious gems.

In Other Congregations.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Rev. R. S. Storrs, who has long been antagonistic to Mr. Beecher, in his prayer for the sick "in our [his] congregation Sunday, added the words, "and vicinity." He also prayed that the "impending blow might be spared." It was generally received by the congregation as a reference to Mr. Beecher.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 7.—T. De Witt Talmage, in alluding to Mr. Beecher in his sermon Sunday, said that while persons might differ from him in politics and religion, all would acknowledge that when Henry Ward Beecher died a vast vacuum would be left in this city and land. After paying a tribute to Mr. Beecher's genius, brilliancy and eloquence he called on the congregation to join him in prayer for the dying pastor.

LONDON, March 7.—The news of the critical condition of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher created a profound sensation here, particularly in religious circles of the dissenting school, and at the Sunday evening service in the City temple, in which church Mr. Beecher several times preached during his last visit to London, the Rev. Dr. Parker, pastor of the City Temple, took occasion to eulogize the famous American divine in the highest terms.

The President Telegraphs.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 7.—President Cleveland telegraphed an inquiry Saturday night as to Mr. Beecher's condition, and asked if there was any hope of recovery. Hundreds of telegrams have been received by the family from all parts of the country, but will not be given to the public while Mr. Beecher lives.

GAVE CLINCH A CLINCHER.

A Lecherous Chicagoan Killed by a Brave Woman.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Miles J. Clinch, a grocer, was shot and fatally wounded at 10 o'clock Saturday morning by Mrs. Maggie Shay, at the latter's residence, 122 Barber street, while trying to break down a door to force an entrance. Mrs. Shay fired two shots through the door from a revolver, one of them striking Clinch under the right eye. Clinch was taken to his home, 547 Union street, where it was found that the bullet had taken an upward direction and lodged in his brain. There was no quarrel between the families, and no reason but a desire on Clinch's part for the company of Shay's wife to account for the affair. Mrs. Shay is the wife of Fireman M. J. Shay, of Fire Insurance Patrol No. 1, and her husband is therefore away from home a greater part of the time, a circumstance that was apparently known to Clinch.

Thinks It a Horrid Nightmare.

LONDON, March 7.—Lord Salisbury, speaking at the National Conservative club Saturday night, said that no greater disaster could befall the government than the retirement of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach from the chief secretaryship of Ireland. He hoped, however, that Beach's retirement would be only temporary. The Irish question, he continued, was ever a horrid nightmare, paralyzing their energies. The system of jury trial in Ireland required reconstruction. Otherwise it should be disposed of entirely. Legislation was also impeded by the disgraceful scenes enacted in Westminster. The speaker also admitted that remedial measures of far-reaching tendencies were required for Ireland, after, however, restoring respect for law in that country.

Some More Incendiary Deviltry.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Evidences of another attempt to burn the Jersey City ferry houses and station of the Pennsylvania railroad were discovered Saturday morning. A piece of cotton wadding about eighteen inches square and about three inches thick, saturated with a chemical mixture, was found on the outside of the gentlemen's toilet room at the northern end of the ferry house. The cotton was hung up on a piece of iron near the wood work. Immediately beneath it a hole had been cut about four inches in diameter, sufficiently large to admit of a hand from the inside to reach it. The edges of the cotton were singed and burned.

Bulldozed by Strikers.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 7.—It is likely that the strike of the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio yardmen will assume serious proportions before the difficulty is finally settled. The attitude of the men is becoming more determined, and the action of the railway official indicates that they have decided to ignore the strikers and operate a new force of men in their yards. Several attempts have been made by the company to move cars, but have been deterred by the threatening attitude of the strikers.

All the Difference in the World.

LONDON, March 7.—Whistler, the eccentric American artist, wrote the other day to Gilbert, the author of light opera, referring to his latest production: "I like 'Ruddygore' much, but hate the name. Why not say Bloodygore at once? It's the same thing." To which Gilbert replied: "Am pleased that you like the piece, but can't agree about the synonymous meaning of bloody and ruddy. How would you like me to say I liked your bloody cheek?"

Strikers Win a Victory.

BOSTON, March 7.—The strike of the 200 marble workers of Bowker, Terry & Co. terminated Saturday night, a signal victory for the men. The firm receded from its position, recognized the order and advanced the wages of all its employes, those receiving above $10 a week getting an advance of $1, and those receiving less than $10 a week getting a raise of $1.50 a week. The firm also agreed to a fifty-nine hours' a week schedule.

An Indianapolis Journalist Suicides.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 7.—Joseph W. Bingham, well known in newspaper circles, committed suicide Saturday morning at the residence of his father by cutting his throat with a razor. For some time past he has suffered from insomnia, and this, aided by overwork, led to melancholy. He was 27 years old.

Heavy Snow in New England.

BOSTON, March 7.—Reports from all parts of New England show that Saturday night's snow-storm was the most severe of the winter. The railroads which had just been cleared of snow are again blockaded and the highways are in many places impassable.

An Original Knight Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, March 7.—William Cook, one of the organizers of the Knights of Labor, died Sunday, aged 65.

INDIANA'S DIFFICULTY.

Plan Suggested to Straighten It Out—The House and the Governor.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 7.—It is learned from a strictly reliable source that several prominent gentlemen have written to President Cleveland, asking that President Smith of the senate be appointed Judge Turpie's successor as district attorney, and that the governor has signified his purpose of calling an extra session of the legislature if this appointment be made. Representative Patten's selection as warden of the southern prison, Dr. Shiveley's appointment to a position on the state board of health, and Smith's resignation to accept the district attorneyship, should the appointment be made, will cause three vacancies to be filled by election, but each of the districts is solidly Democratic, and there would be no change in the political status of the legislature. This would require thirty days, and the extra session would be called to meet at the end of that time, the Democrats conceding Robertson's right to preside over the senate during its continuance. A strong effort is being made for Smith, but Judge Turpie is understood to oppose it because his contest and Smith's confirmation would both be before the senate at the same time. Others and equally prominent Democrats, however, regard this as the only way out of the muddle.

Saturday the governor sent a message to the house requesting that engrossed bills, numbered 5, 9, 11, 15, 18, 20, 45, 75, 153, 108, 111, 127, 191, 198, 288, 218, 242, and 293, be sent to him that they might be transmitted to the senate for comparison. The speaker refused to comply with the request, declared appeals out of order, and Jewett finally gave notice of protest.

Hicks-Beach Resigns.

LONDON, March 7.—It is officially announced that the Rt. Hon. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach has resigned the office of chief secretary for Ireland, and that the Rt. Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, secretary of state for Scotland, has been appointed to succeed him. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach is suffering from cataract, and his resignation was due to that cause. The entire London press expresses hope that Sir Michael Hicks-Beach will be able to resume the duties of the office of chief secretary for Ireland. The Daily News asserts its unbelief that Lord Salisbury possesses the nerve to practice what he preaches.

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Eclectric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used, instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well."

Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnic Salve at 25 cents per box, by Frank Sherer & Co.

Convenient pleasant, and certain in their results, are Acker's Dyspepsia Tablets. Recommended by physicians and endorsed by all who have used them. The best remedy for Dyspepsia, Flatulency, and Constipation. Guaranteed, and sold at 25c. by Prentice & Evenson druggist, O. P. O

SACRAMENTAL SUNDAY.

NEARLY FOUR HUNDRED NEW MEMBERS FOR DR. TALMAGE.

Grand Success of the Celebrated Brooklyn Divine's Latest Revival at the Tabernacle—"This Day Shall Be Unto You For a Memorial."

BROOKLYN, March 6.—This is sacramental day in the Brooklyn Tabernacle, and the sermon is preached at the reception of three hundred and forty-seven new members, making six hundred and ninety received during the present revival, so that the communicant membership now is four thousand and fifty-one. The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., the pastor, gave the right hand of fellowship to the new members, and baptized about ninety. The audience sang:

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love.

There was a great arch of flowers over the pulpit, containing the words: "I believe in the communion of saints." Dr. Talmage took two texts: I Chronicles, xxiii, 5: "And four thousand praised the Lord;" and Exodus xii, 14: "This day shall be unto you for a memorial." He said:

When week before last the communicant membership of this church passed into the four thousand, now reaching four thousand and fifty-one, the first part of my text came to my mind, and I bethought myself what a grand thing it would be if the four thousand of our communicant membership would, like the four thousand of the ancient Temple, make it their lifetime business to praise the Lord. Let them all take harp and timbrel and anthem and doxology!

The allusion of my second text is to the Passover, which commemorated the deliverance of the children of Israel on the night when the destroying angel sped through the land of Egypt, destroying the enemy but saving the Israelites, because on the doorposts of their dwellings was sprinkled the blood of a lamb. To-day we come to celebrate a grander Passover, all peril going away from our soul at the sight of the sprinkled blood of the Lamb of God on the doorposts of our hearts. Christ, our Passover, sacrificed for us. "This day shall be unto you for a memorial."

The sacramental Sabbath, whether it comes in an American church or an English chapel, or a Scotch kirk, is more impressive than any other Sabbath. Its light is holier, calmer, sweeter; its voices more tender, its touch is softer, its memories are more chastened. The fruits of the Christian life suddenly ripen like orchards on the hill fronting the south. The wine of the holy sacrament seems pressed from the grapes of celestial vineyards, and the bread broken seems to drop from the hand of him who parted the loaves for 5,000. We walk to the church of God with more thoughtful face and with quieter step. The jubilant songs of other Sunday's are struck through with pensiveness and are all a-tremble with tears; and when at the close of the service, at the door we shake hands, it is with a more cordial grasp, because we feel thrilling through our body and mind and soul the great doctrines of Christian brotherhood; and our minds go back to our forefathers celebrating the sacrament in times of persecution in Scotland among the Highlands; commemorating the dying love of Christ, while they were pursued of their enemies, pouring the wine into rough wooden cups, dipping the waters of baptism from the mountain rock, until one day they heard the voices of their enemies coming up the hill, and the pastor cried out: "Oh, Lord, the Shepherd, have mercy on the sheep!" and instantly there was a roaring heard as of great floods, and sure enough a cloud had burst and there were great torrents running down the mountain side that whelmed their foes with sudden wrath. What a deliverance it was for them on that sacramental day! Oh, that on this sacramental day the cloud of God's mercy might burst and our sins be whelmed and our souls be saved! This is the amethyst of days. This is the pearl of days. This is the diamond of days. This is the day of days. Among the ten thousand million ages of eternity the first Sabbath of March, 1887, will be to you significant and memorable, for "this day shall be unto you" forever and forever "a memorial."

There is much in the scene of to-day to impress us, because it is a time of re-enforcement. I used to remark that if I ever lived to see our membership reach 4,000 I thought I would be willing to say with one of old: "Now, Lord, lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation." But I have changed my mind, and I never so much wanted to stay as now, so as to see them all enlisted for God and to watch their victories. What might they not accomplish in the way of making the world better if they were all baptized with a double portion of the Holy Ghost! Four thousand! That is four full regiments, as military men count a thousand to a regiment. I think not one hypocrite among them. Taken into the church sometimes in large numbers, but each one as carefully examined as to change of heart, and evidence of regeneration as though he or she were the only one presenting himself or herself. Many of our former members have passed away into the skies and have joined the church triumphant, but we have 4,000 and more left for the church militant. To arms! Quit you like men! We want no reserve corps among them. Go into action all of you. Some will be officers in command; some will make cavalry charge; some will be sharpshooters; some will stand guard; some will be on picket duty; many of you will belong to the rank and file. Let there be no stragglers, none off on furlough, not one deserter. With Christ for commander-in-chief, and the one starred, blood striped banner of manger and cross to lead the way, I give the order that the general in the war gave, when rising in his stirrups, his hair flying in the wind, he cried out till all the host heard him: "Forward! the whole line!"

There is also something in such a scene to deeply impress one, because it rehearses a death scene. Now, you know, there is something very touching in such an incident. Though you are in a hotel, and it is a stranger that is dying, how softly you move about the place, and if you come up to his couch, it is with uncovered head. Even the voice of the jester is stopped, and when the eyes of that stranger are closed it is with emotion. But I am to tell you this morning of a death such as has never before or since occurred. When we die, we die for ourselves and the crises is alleviated by all beneficent ministries. Bathings for the hands, bathings for the head, bathings for the feet; the light turned down low or set in just the right place; all the offices of affection about us when we come to die. But not so with Jesus. He died not for himself but he died in torment and he died for others. He might have moved around in gardens made by his own hand, an earthly potentate amid vineyards and olive groves sloping to the sea. Instead of being tossed in the fishing boat on Tiberius he might have chosen a sunshiny day and a pleasant wave for the lake crossing. Instead of being followed by an unwashed rabble he might have charmed sanhedrims and universities with his eloquence. Instead of a cross and a bunch of twisted brambles on his brow He might have died in the castle of a Roman merchant, the air bland with lilies and frankincense. But no; he died in torture; the good for the bad; the kind for the cruel; the wise for the ignorant; the divine for the human. Oh how tenderly we feel towards any one who has done a great kindness and perhaps at the imperiling of his own life! How we ought to feel towards Christ, the captain of salvation, on the white horse riding down our foes; but in the moment he made the victorious charge, the lances of death struck him!

There was a very touching scene among an Indian tribe in the last century. It seemed that one of the chieftains had slain a man belonging to an opposite tribe, and that tribe came up and said: "We will exterminate you unless you surrender the man who committed that crime." The chieftain who did the crime stepped out from the ranks and said: "I am not afraid to die, but I have a wife and four children, and I have a father aged and a mother aged, whom I support by hunting, and I sorrow to leave them helpless." Just as he said that his old father from behind stepped out and said: "He shall not die. I take his place. I am old and well stricken in years. I can do no good. I might as well die. My days are almost over. He cannot be spared. Take me." And they accepted the sacrifice. Wonderful sacrifice! you say, but not so wonderful as that found in the Gospel, for we deserved to die, aye, we were sentenced when Christ, not worn out with years but in the flush of his youth, said: "Save that man from going down to the pit; I am the ransom. Put his burdens on my shoulders. Let his stripes fall on my back. Take my heart for his heart. Let me die that he may live." Shall it be told to-day in Heaven that notwithstanding all those wounds, and all that blood, and all those tears and all that agony you would not accept him?

Was it for crimes that I had done,
He groaned upon the tree?
Amazing pity, grace unknown,
And love beyond degree.

There is no woe amid the surroundings of that scene that impresses me more than that that of his own mother. You need not point her out to me. I can see by the sorrow, the the anguish, the woe, by the upthrown hands. That all means mother. "Oh," you say, "why didn't she go down to the foot of the hill and sit with her back to the scene? It was too horrible for her to look upon." Do you not know when a child is in anguish or trouble it always makes a heroine of a mother? Take her away, you say, from the cross. You cannot drag her away. She will keep on looking. As long as her son breathes she will stand there looking. Oh, what a scene it was for a tender hearted mother to look upon! How gladly she would have sprung to his relief! It was her son. "Her son!" How gladly she would have clambered up on the cross and hung there herself if her son could have been relieved! How strengthening she would have been to Christ if she might have come close by him and soothed him! Oh, there was a good deal in what the little sick child said, upon whom a surgical operation of a painful nature must be performed. The doctor said: "That child won't live through this operation unless you encourage him. You go in and get his consent." The father told him all the doctor said, and added: "Now, John, will you go through with it? Will you consent to it?" He looked very pale, and he thought a minute, and said: "Yes, father, if you will hold my hand, I will." So the father held his hand, and led him straight through the peril. Oh, woman, in your hour of anguish, whom do you want with you? Mother. Young man, in your hour of trouble, who do you want to console you? Mother. If the mother of Jesus could only have taken those bleeding feet into her lap! If she might have taken the dying head on her bosom! If she might have said to Him: "It will soon be over, Jesus; it will soon be over, and we will meet again and it will be all well." But no, she dared not come up so close. They would have struck her back with their hammers. They would have kicked her down the hill.

There can be no alleviation at all. Jesus must suffer and Mary must look. I suppose she thought of the birth hour in Bethlehem. I suppose she thought of the time when with her boy in her bosom she hastened on in the darkness in the flight towards Egypt. I suppose she thought of his boyhood, when he was the joy of her heart. I suppose she thought of the thousand kindnesses he had done her, not forsaking her or forgetting her, even in his last moment, but turning to John and saying: "There is mother; take her with you. She is old now. She cannot help herself. Do for her just as I would have done for her if I had lived. Be very tender and gentle with her. Behold thy mother!" She thought it all over, and there is no memory like a mother's memory and there is no woe like a mother's woe.

I remark again: This is a tender scene because it is a Christian reunion. Why was it that in the sessional meeting, when I asked a woman if it were her son who sat next to her, making profession of his faith, she made no answer; but after a moment, trying to control her emotion she burst into tears. I said within myself, she need not tell me the story. It is the old story of a prodigal got back. "The dead is alive, and the lost is found." Oh, how many families there are that rejoice together to-day.

These Christians during the rest of the year, perhaps, will not know much about each other. You go in one circle of society, these go in some other circle of society, and this one travels in that path and this one the other path; but to-day we all come on one platform, and we make one confession, and we cling to one cross, and we gaze upon one death anguish. It seems to me this morning not like a church, but like a great family circle, and we join hands around the cross of Christ and we say: "One lord, one faith, one baptism, one cross, one Christ, one doxology, one heaven!" While I stand here it seems to me as if this communion table, which is only seven or eight feet long, and three or four feet wide, widens until all the Christians of our own denomination can sit at it; and still the table widens until all the Christians in this land of all names and denominations come and sit at it; and still the table widens until it bridges the sea, and Christians on the other side of the Atlantic come and sit at it; and still that table widens, until the redeemed of heaven mingle in the communion. Church militant, church triumphant,

One army of the living God
To His command we bow,
Part of the host have crossed the flood,
And part are crossing now.

Again, my friends, this is an absorbing scene, because it arouses so many precious memories. We look back and remember the days of our childhood when, long before we knew the meaning of the bread and the wine, we sat in the side pews on sacramental days, or in the galleries, and looked as our fathers, mothers and older brothers and sisters sat at the communion. Or, if we sat with them, we pulled at mother's dress and said: "What does that mean?" "What is that in the cup? What is that on the plate?" O, yes; we remember those sacramental days of our boyhood. We remember how much more tender father was on that day than on any other day. We remember how mother stood, and without saying one word looked at us, and her eyes got full of tears. Oh, the dear old soul! They have gone! But until the day of our death we will associate this holy ordinance with their memory. And when our work on earth is done we will just go up and sit down beside them in the heavenly church, as we used to sit beside them in the earthly church, and then we will drink new wine in our father's kingdom.

Behold the saints, beloved of God,
Washed are their robes in Jesus' blood;
Brighter than angels, lo! they shine,
Their glories splendid and sublime.

I remark again: This scene is tender to-day because it is a confessional. You and I remember the time when if a man had charged us with anything like imperfection or wrong doing, we would have thrown ourselves back on our honor and said: "You don't know who you are talking to. I shall resent such an insult to my honor and integrity." We do not feel that way to-day. As we gaze upon the sacrifice of Christ and think of what we have been and what we have done, our hearts melt within us. We see one dying accursed for our sin, and we hear him in his dying words begging for our service, and yet how little service we have rendered. Of this short life we have begrudged God even a fragment. Alas! alas! Some of us have lived out the most of our days, and yet we have rendered to God no earnest service. Sad, that we could have so maltreated him on whom all our hopes depend. Oh, my brethren and sisters in Christ, to-day join hands with me in a confession before Christ! If there be any place more humble than another, let us take it. If there be any prayer more importunate than another, let us breathe it. If there be any confession more bitter than another, let us now weep it out.

Well might the sun in darkness hide
And shut his glories in,
When Christ, the mighty Maker died
For man, the creature's sin.

Once more: This is a tender and absorbing scene because it is anticipative. My brethren, we are not always going to stay here. This is not our home. This is only the vestibule of the church in which, at last, we expect to enter. After awhile our names will be taken off the church books, or there will be a mark in the margin to indicate that we have gone up to a better church and to a higher communion. Our father is not going to let his children remain in the dust. The grave is no place for us to stay in. "The trumpet shall sound and the dead shall rise." The Lord shall descend from heaven with a shout and the voice of the archangel and we shall rise. The white robe in which they put us to our last slumber here must get whiter. Oh, the reunion of patriarchs, and apostles, and prophets, and of all our glorified kindred, and of that "great multitude that no man can number!" Our sorrows over; our journey ended. It will be as when kings banquet. And, just as the snow of winter melts and the fields will brighten in the glorious springtime, so it will be with all these cold sorrows of earth; they shall be melted away at last before the warm sunshine of heaven.

While I present these thoughts this morning does it not seem that heaven comes very near to us, as though our friends, whom we thought a great way off, are not in the distance, but close by? You have sometimes come down to a river at nightfall, and you have been surprised how easily you could hear voices across that river. You shouted over to the other side of the river and they shouted back. It is said that when George Whitefield preached in Third street, Philadelphia, one evening time, his voice was heard clear across to the New Jersey shore. When I was a little while chaplain in the army I remember how at eventide we could easily hear the voices of the pickets across the Potomac, just when they were using ordinary tones. And as we come to-day and stand by the river of Jordan that divides us from our friends who are gone, it seems to me we stand on one bank and they stand on the other; and it is only a narrow stream, and our voices go and their voices come. Hark! Hush! I hear distinctly what they say: "These are they who come out of great tribulations, and had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb." Still the voice comes across the waters, and I hear: "We hunger no more, we thirst no more, neither shall the sun light on us, nor any heat, for the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne leads us to living fountains of water, and God wipeth away all tears from our eyes."

A MARVELOUS FEAT.

Mind-Reader Bishop Astonishes a Select Gotham Audience.

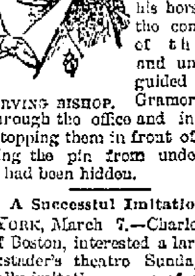

NEW YORK, March 7.—A notable gathering, including Justin McCarthy, Marshall P. Wilder, John Mackay, Belle Archer, Mrs. Frank Leslie, and about a hundred other specially invited guests assembled in the parlors of the Hoffman house Saturday afternoon to witness some of the marvelous feats of the mind-reader, Washington Irving Bishop. The event of the evening was an attempt by Mr. Bishop to find a medallion pin (belonging to Mrs. Frank Leslie) that had been hidden within a mile of the hotel. Henry Guy Carleton selected E. H. Hoyt, Thomas W. Knox, and H. C. Bunner were to act as a committee to see that there was no collusion.

They got into a light buggy, Mr. Bishop, securely blindfolded, jumping in after them. Bishop seized the reins and driving rapidly through the streets followed exactly the circuitous route taken by those who hid the pin. Arriving at Gramercy park, the blind driver stopped his horses, dragged the committee out of the buggy and unhesitatingly guided them into Gramercy Park hotel, through the office and into the main parlor, stopping them in front of the mantel and taking the pin from under the vase where it had been hidden.

A Successful Imitation.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Charles H. Montague, of Boston, interested a large audience at Dockstader's theatre Sunday night by successfully imitating many of the remarkable feats of Bishop, the mind-reader.

The Latest Bulgarian Revolt.

LONDON, March 7.—A dispatch from Sofia says that nine of the Rustchuk rebels have been sentenced to death. The foreign consuls at Rustchuk urged the authorities to postpone the date of the execution of the condemned men and the request was granted, otherwise they would have been executed Saturday. A number of other rebels were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment. Capt. Bollman, who it is alleged, was an active participant in the riot, claimed to be a Russian subject and sought German protection. It is reported that order has been restored everywhere.

SOFIA, March 7.—Nine officers and civilians engaged in the mutiny at Rustchuk were shot at that place Sunday morning. The private soldiers now in custody for the same offense will be tried by court-martial.

IT IS WONDERFUL

how easily rheumatism begins, and how insidiously it grows in the system, until one is startled to find himself its victim in either the acute or chronic form. He then learns the fearful tenacity of its grip and the utter powerlessness of the ordinary remedies to give relief.

Probably to no disease have physicians given more study, and none has more completely baffled their efforts to provide a specific; and until Athlophoros was discovered there was no medicine which would surely cure rheumatism, neuralgia and nervous or sick headache. Thousands of testimonials like the following prove beyond question that Athlophoros is the only reliable remedy, and that it will do all that is claimed for it.

East Saginaw, Mich.

About four weeks ago I was taken with a severe attack of rheumatism. My feet were so swollen that I could not wear my boots; in fact, I could just hobble along, and got very little sleep at night, as I suffered intense pain whether I sat up or laid down. I went out and bought a pair of crutches to enable me to get around. After buying them, when on my way home, I stopped in at W. B. Moor's drug store, and noticing Athlophoros for sale I decided to try a bottle. After taking half a bottle I laid my crutches aside, only using them the one time—on my way home. The swelling is all reduced, and I now wear my boots with perfect ease. I have not had any pain since. I would not take $20 for the balance of the bottle if I could not get more. Any one suffering with rheumatism need not suffer any longer if they will take Athlophoros. JNO GRIGWARE,
Mate of Steamer W. R. Burt, running between East Saginaw and Bay City, Mich."

Every druggist should keep Athlophoros and Athlophoros Pills, but where they cannot be bought of the druggist the Athlophoros Co., 112 Wall St., New York, will send either (carriage paid) on receipt of regular price, which is $1.00 per bottle for Athlophoros and 50c. for Pills.

Best results are obtained when combined with other medicinal roots and herbs, as in Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which is the best known remedy for all blood diseases, stomach and liver troubles, pimples, costiveness, bad breath, piles, ague and malaria diseases, indigestion, loss of appetite' low spirits, headache and all diseases of the kidneys. Price 50 cents of Pentice & Evenson, opposite postoffice.

Much Cry and Little Wool.

ERIE, Pa., March 7.—At 3 o'clock Sunday morning, at Mill village, this county, burglars blew open the big safe in the hardware store of J. S. Ross, using gunpowder enough to blow the safe into fragments, the front of the store into the street, and break windows in several buildings in that vicinity. The thieves did $1,500 worth of damage and secured less than $100 worth of property. This is the fifth safe robbery in Mill village in the last two years.

—The family of Mr. W. H. Leonard will probably remove to Chicago next week. Their new home is being finished as rapidly as possible and will be ready for occupancy by that time.

—A large number of people visited the artesian well yesterday—many with jugs, and considerable water was carried away, but there is enough left to supply the city for a generation at least.

—The Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hold its regular meeting on Tuesday, March 8th, at 4 o'clock, in the Wayside Inn. All young ladies are cordially invited to attend.

—"Oh, go ahead, pitch into me," said Senator Lovejoy to a group of water works agitators this morning, "I'm like the boy that was whipped in school. He got it so often that finally he rather enjoyed it."

—At ten o'clock this morning was held the funeral of Mr. John Dolan, of the first ward. The services were in St. Mary's church the Rev. Father Roche officiating, and the interment took place at the Catholic cemetery.

—An excited crowd of men and boys stood in front of Vankirk Bros'. store last night and watched the electric light which seemed to be out of order. The trouble was caused by burned out carbon and was soon remedied.

—Two notices for damages, the amount in each case being about three hundred dollars, were served on the city to-day. One plaintiff is Levi Horn and the other Mrs. Mary Canary. The ground for suit is an overflow of surface water.

—What promised to be a decided sensation was developed this morning in the shape of a first ward man's attempt to saturate his wife's clothing with kerosene, and set her on fire. The story, when investigated, proved to be little more than the work of a vivid imagination.

—Miss Florence Bindley, in "The Heroine in Rags", is supported by one of the strongest dramatic companies now on the stage. She was the first American soubriette to make a success in England, appearing at the Convent Garden theatre for one hundred nights.

—Willie M., the fourteen months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Griswold, Chatham street, first ward, died at twelve o'clock on Satureay night of lung fever. The funeral will be held at six o'clock this evening, the late hour being necessary in order to give absent friends time to reach the city by the late afternoon trains.

—Lenten services are being held at St. Paul's church in Boston, and among the names of the clergymen officiating is that of A. L. Royce, of the United States navy. As Mr. Royce was formerly rector of Christ church he has friends innumerable in the city who will be glad to hear from him.

—This evening a drill team is to be organized under able supervision at the Wayside Inn, the members being boys from twelve to eighteen. It is desired that there be as large an attendance as possible as Professor Keyes is to give a fifteen minute talk on some subject of interest, and other entertaining features have also been provided.

—In his last will and testament Peter O'Hagan, of Beloit, left all his property to Mrs. O'Hagan. Because of this, when the will was brought up for probate today, Richard O'Hagan, a son, appeared as a contestant, claiming that the document was not properly executed. The case was warmly contested.

—"Lent has made considerable difference with us," said the good-natured leader of Smith & Corliss' orchestra, but we still keep going. Wednesday night we play for a Knights of Pythias reception at Baraboo, Thursday we go to Tomah, Friday to Eau Claire and Saturday to Augusta.

—One enterprising druggist tried to hurry along the season for spring porous plasters, by appearing on the street this morning with a last season straw hat perched jauntily over his left ear. Another forerunner of warm weather was the window of an east side restaurant, where the wide awake proprietor kept pace with the season by displaying numerous ice cream signs.

—Sam Kingman, whose hand was crushed between two Milwaukee & St. Paul freight cars a short time ago, resumed work this morning. Dr. Whiting was able to avoid the amputation of any of the injured fingers. It is a strange coincidence that both Kingsley, the man who took Kingman's place, and Jay Mayhew, who succeeded Kingsley, were hurt in almost the same way that he himself was.

—Private letters from Mr. and Mrs. E. Leavitt, written the latter part of February at San Diego, California, indicate that they are not particularly captivated with the far west. Mr. Leavitt says: "It is 82 in the shade, but I wouldn't live here if they would give me the whole country—you can't live on climate and oranges. If they had water they could irrigate, but they have no water—haven't had a good drink of water since we came here, but have had the worst cold I ever had. Janesville is good enough for me." They will spend some little time at San Jose before coming home.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox who was born in Johnstown, Rock county, thirty-six years ago, is now living at Meriden, Connecticut, where she has one of the prettiest, best and most luxurious homes in the place. Her poetry, which at first brought her nothing at all, is now the source of a good income. A correspondent says of her: "The writer of "Poems of Passion" looks younger than she really is. Her figure is slight and girlish, crowned with abundant red-brown hair. While not exactly delicate looking, her complexion is pale. The expression of her features is animated and kindly, and her bearing cordial."

PERSONAL.

—Miss Flossie DeLong will start tomorrow morning for Milwaukee, where she will spend several weeks.

—Mrs. Geo. A. Cook of Chicago, is in the city for a few days, the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Graham, of Milton avenue. Also Miss Emma F. Hemmingway, of St. Paul, a niece of Mrs. Graham.

—Miss Jennie Peterson, who has been spending the past four months as the guest of her friend, Miss Ella Lugg, of the first ward, started to-day for Black Earth, where she will spend a few days and then return to the hospital at Mendota, and resume her duties as attendant, a position she has occupied for three years. Miss Peterson possesses a rich soprano voice, well cultivated, which has won for her many friends in musical circles. She will be especially missed from the society and Sunday school where she has worked during the winter.

MISS FLORENCE BINDLEY.

With a play like the "Heroine in Rags" which was given at the opera house last evening, to criticize and to do justice to the many excellent actors and actresses, novelty in production, scenic and mechanical effects, beside the really beautiful drama is indeed a task. The play from beginning to end is a complete revolution in dramatic performances, being full of new and interesting ideas, startling situations, and demanding the interest of the audience until finished. Florence Bindley, the little star, has won for herself a place among the brightest lights.—Rochester Democrat.

THE WEATHER.

At seven o'clock yesterday morning the thermometer indicated 22 degrees above zero. Cloudy with east wind. At one o'clock p. m. the register was 45 degrees above zero. Cloudy, with south wind. For the corresponding hours last year the register was 16 and 45 degrees above zero. At seven o'clock this morning the thermometer indicated 32 degrees above zero. Clear, with west wind. At one o'clock p. m. the register was 37 degrees above zero. Cloudy with northwest wind For the corresponding hours one year ago the register was 24 and 40 degrees above zero.

Wretched, Indeed.

Are those whom a confirmed tendency to biliousness, subject to the various and changeful symptoms indicative of liver complaint, nausea, sick headache, constipation, furred tongue, an unpleasant breath, a dull or sharp pain in the neighborhood of the affected organ, impurity of blood, and loss of appetite, signalize it as one of the most common of maladies. There is, however, a benign specific for the disease and all its unpleasant manifestations. It is the concurrent testimony of the public and the medical profession, that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a medicine which achieves results speedily felt, thorough and benign. Besides rectifying liver disorder, it invigorates the feeble, conquers kidney and bladder complaints, and hastens the convalescence of those recovering from enfeebling diseases. Moreover, it is the grand specific for fever and ague.

Stray Leaves from Reporters' Note Books.

"Oh my!" she gurgled rapturously, as her husband, a well known railroad man was showing her the cab of a passenger engine. "Isn't it just too perfectly delightful. What cunning little thingumbobs to start it with. But," and she looked at him anxiously, "where is the crank you steer around curves with?" The railroad man gave it up.

Said a man who has been building houses for the past twenty years, "When you get ready to put up a residence, never let a tinman or contractor persuade you that the gutters should be left until red with rust before painting. That is solely for their benefit. The paint goes on more easily after the rust begins, but the tin has begun its own destruction. It will go on rusting under the paint just as steadily as though it had no protection, though perhaps not quite so fast. Instead of waiting for a rain storm to wash off the soid or resin, so that paint will stick, have it washed off and painted at once."

E. B. Heimstreet is wondering what effect the hasty adjournment of congress will have on his weather signals. By the failure to pass the general deficiency bill, several government institutions are left in bad shape. There are only postage stamps enough left at the Milwaukee signal service office to run it a month, and as no provision for telegraph charges were made, no bulletins have been sent out since Friday. Those received in Janesville came from Chicago and did not reach here until noon. If the bulletins should be cut off, which is improbable, Heimstreet's new flags will be useless. These flags are the same as were mentioned in the Gazette some time ago, Fair weather is indicated by plain white, and storms by plain blue. A three cornered black pennant above either of these indicates a rise in temperature, while placed below, it indicates a fall. The cold wave signal remains unchanged.

A WATER WORKS PROPHET.

To the Editor.

I fear Janesville is about to experience the fate of the fishes in the fable Being uncomfortable while frying in the pan, they flopped out, only to find themselves broiling on the live coals.

I will risk my reputation as a water prophet on the prediction that, if the pending amendment of our city charter becomes a law, the city will put in the water works and the council will boss the job.

Who besides the mayor and common council and possibly the owners of the Miltimore franchise, can see the "nigger in the fence" of the proposition forbidding the use of that franchise except by consent of the council?

And while providing for the election of street commissioner by the people, subject to removal by the common council, why not include the city treasurer, city clerk and in short, all city officers. Better all turn in and urge Mr. Lovejoy to kill those two amendments. So says one

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

At a regular meeting of St. Patrick's T. A. and B. society, held last evening, the following resolutions were adopted on the death of the late Thomas Finune:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almight God to remove from our midst our esteemed and beloved brother, Thomas Finane, who departed this life March 1st, 1887, and it being the desire of the society to express its sincere sorrow for his death and to show respect for his memory, therefore be it

Resolved, That by the death of Thomas Finane, St. Patrick's T. A. and B. society has lost a faithful member, the cause of total abstinence a devoted follower and his wife a true and affectionate husband.

Resolved, That we extend to the wife and friends of our deceased brother our sincere condolence in their hour of affliction, trusting that the knowledge that he departed this life strengthened by the sacraments of his Holy church, and respected by all who knew him, may help to alleviate their great sorrow.

Resolved. That these resolutions be entered upon the minute book of the society, and, that a copy of the same be presented to the wife of our deceased brother, and also be printed in the city papers and Catholic Citizen.

CURRENT PUBLICATIONS.

Notes on Some of the Recently Issued Periodicals.

Joel Chandler Harris writes his new story "Aunt Fountain's Prisoner" in a different strain from anything that he has yet tried. Appearing in the March Scribners it has attracted much attention. It may be said very truthfully however, that the current number of this magazine is all good and can hardly be criticised.

The Southern Bivouac for March opens with an illustrated article on the "Wines and Vines of Virginia," touching an industry not very well known. This is followed by the last of Henry W. Austin's suggestive and original papers upon "My Pilgrim Fathers;" and next comes the story of the Merrimac's triumphs and of its destruction, as told by Dr. Dinwiddie B. Phillips, who was surgeon of the vessel. Among the other articles is a quaint Georgia character sketch entitled "Squire Johnson's Court," another of the papers on Captain John Semmes, and a paper by J. W. Wright on "The Trial of Vallandigham."

An entertaining article on "Dueling in Paris" is one of the strong features of the March Harper's. It is written by a Parisan authority, Theodore Child, and is capitally illustrated by a Parisian artist, Henri Dupray. Mr. Child claims that "never has the rapier been held in higher honor in France than at the present day; never has the art of fencing been taught with more science, and learned with greater avidity; and perhaps never since the time of Richelieu and the Fronde has duelling been more common in France.

The March Wide Awake has for its frontpiece one of Hassam's "wet-day pictures," entitled "A Late March Afternoon." Garrett, too, has some characteristic work both in his strong drawings for Mrs. Harriet Prescott Spofford's ballad, "Blind Milton," and his fanciful sketches for Miss Quincy's "Fairy Folk All." W. L. Taylor is represented at his best by an irresistible little fellow in cap and ulster, accompanying the poem by Abigail Adams Foster, entitled "Just Seven Years Old." Every page of the whole number in fact is a good one, in every way, both as to reading matter and as to illustrations.

One of the most interesting magazines of the month is the Forum. Its table of contents includes a dissertation upon "Henry George's Economic Heresies," by George Grunton, who strongly objects to the idea that improved machinery lessens the laboring man's chances; an article by Edward Everett Hale, on "Books That Have Helped Me"; and others by Professor Richard Ely, upon "Labor Organizations"; by Professor Theodore Gill, on "The Sea Serpent Myth"; by Judge A. E. Thomas, on "Shall the Jury System be Retained," and by Neal Dow on "The Effectiveness of Prohibition." There is also an unsigned paper entitled "Confessions of a Universalist," which is attracting a great deal of attention.

Robert G. Ingersoll is one of the notable contributors to the North American Review for this month, his paper being entitled "Some Interrogation Points." The remainder of the table of contents may be summarized as follows: "Why am I a Baptist" Rev. Thomas Armitage, D. D., LL. D.; "Drury's Bluff and Petersburg," General G. T. Beauregard; "Our King in a Dress Coat," Moncure D. Conway; "A Letter on Prayer," The Duke of Argyll; "Modern Feudalism." James F. Hudson; "Some Unpublished War Letters, addressed to General Sheridan;" "Our Inequalities of Suffrage." J. Chester Lyman; "Constitutional Reform in New York," Colonel George Bliss; "A Rejoider to General Beauregard," Rear Admiral Taylor; "Working Women," Ida M. Van Etten.

COLORADO SNOW BANKS.

TRACES OF GLACIAL ACTION FOUND ALONG THE WATERWAYS.

Snow Slides and Their Destructiveness. Length of Time the Snow on the Mountains is Supposed to Last—Frost Never Out of the Ground.

"How often is the snow renewed on the tops of the mountains in Colorado?" asked a reporter of a pioneer Coloradoan, Mr. William N. Byers, who has observed the face of nature in the Rockies for many years.

"Well," said he, "that is a gigantic question which Hayden asked himself years ago, but utterly failed to answer. Some persons think the snow is renewed on the mountains here every two years, but I doubt it greatly, and after all it is a matter of the merest conjecture. We can only use our powers of observation and draw our inferences from the most practical reasons at hand. You have heard, of course, that the main difference existing between our mountains and those of the old world lies in the fact that there glaciers abound, whereas we are free from those terrible anathemas of ice and snow.

"But there are plentiful traces of glacial action at the head of the Arkansas river, and about Lake creek, in the neighborhood of Twin lakes, and on both sides of the Arkansas valley. These traces are a remarkable feature of the rocks. They are called moraines. The rocks are scored in places along the foot of the mountains, and the pushing out of moraines into the Arkansas is observed.

"Another remarkable instance is seen in the region of Grand lake, in Middle park, in the scoring of the rocks in the terminal and lateral moraines. Nearly all these lakes are the result of glacial action. In every ravine in the glacial period there were rivers of ice. As the ravines unite the ice rivers accumulate in the passage down the ravines, and are multiplied in junction with other ravines until they become plows of ice. These plows push both to the right and to the left, but the greater portion is pushed on in front, and is called terminal moraine. The masses pushed out at the sides are known as lateral moraines.

NATURE'S OWN SNOW PLOW.

"This is like a plow with a double share turning a furrow both right and left. The effect on the unbroken rock is to scour and polish it, and to score it into grooves, sweeping everything movable before it, depositing all this moving matter at its sides and directly in front. When the glacial period ended and the temperature of this part of the earth changed it left these rivers of ice projecting down into the plains at the mouth of the gorge, penetrating the surface of the earth to more or less depth, and running through until they gradually melted away. Thus were formed most of our mountain lakes, such as Twin, Grand and Black. I once counted from the summit of Long's peak thirty-five lakes, some of which are covered with ice all the year through.

"The snow probably remains for generations or centuries in many of the snow fields which yet exist in the Rocky mountains. I think it is possible that the snow melts underneath and is replaced. It is safe to say there are no living glaciers now in this portion of the Rocky mountains. There is, however, a slow, hardly perceptible motion of the snow fields down hill.

"Frost has been found in many of the mines in the high mountains above timber line at great depth. In the North Star mine, near Hoosier pass, frost was found at a depth of 148 feet. The great extent of plateau country causes the high temperature of the mountain ranges, and is the cause of the snow melting off, in direct contrast to the mountains of Switzerland or those of the sea coast. The mountains of the sea coast have a low snow line, and it is this which causes glaciers. Along the Alaskan coast the glaciers are pushing out into the sea.

"As for the mountains here, they are much like those of the Himalaya range in Asia, having the same high snow line. This is another argument in favor of Colorado. The high snow line insures a dry, bracing, tonic climate.

"The snow fields worthy of mention which last all the year around are situated between Long's peak and Middle park. These remain during the summer. I have often observed the glacial action on the fence in Middle park. It moves them every winter. This motion is not great. In fact, it is so slow as to be almost imperceptible. Snowslides are very common in Colorado, and most common in the San Juan, near the main range. They occur every year, and frequently when snow falls to any extent.

LOSS OF HUMAN LIFE.

"Many lives are lost in snow slides because people who become indifferent to danger through long association with it will insist on building houses in the wrong location. When snow begins in the mountains it often falls twenty, thirty or forty feet, and so covers up the old snow. The ground is frozen. The frost never comes out of the ground. When we dig there we always find the earth frozen. It may be that the snow gradually melts away, but as I said before, nobody knows anything about it positively. It is a mere matter of conjecture. There are places in the mountains where I don't think the snow ever melts. I don't believe there is any spot where timber grows that snow doesn't melt. If the snow had not melted the timber never could have grown. Above timber growth perpetual shade cannot exist except under a ledge of rock. The sun gets around everywhere in the summer time".

"It is estimated," said State Engineer Nettleton to the reporter later, "that sixty inches of water fall annually on the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains in the form of snow and rain; 80 per cent. of this falls during the winter and spring months. That which falls late in the autumn and early in the winter is most available for irrigation, as it becomes solid, almost like ice, and melts slowly under the summer's sun, affording a steady flow through the irrigating season. Snows falling in late spring melt rapidly, and the waters run down the rivers unused. Although about fifty mountain peaks in Colorado reach an elevation of over 14,000 feet, yet the snow nearly all disappears every season, small quantities remaining only in patches here and there. On this account there are at present no glaciers in the Rocky mountains. The cold mountains condense the moisture in the country adjacent, thereby robbing the plains of their quota of moisture.

"Hence the necessity for irrigation. It is quite easy to foretell the probable amount of water for irrigation purposes for the coming season by watching the amount of snowfall in the mountains.

"Farmers living from twenty to thirty miles from the mountains, or where they can watch the snowfall on the main range of the mountains, have learned how to gauge their crops by the time the snow falls and the quantity. If the snow falls early they expect water for late crops. If the snow fall principally in the spring months they fear short water in summer and fall, and plant or sow accordingly.

"There can be no doubt about the influence that cutting or burning the timber on the mountains has on the flow of our streams. They will on this account become more intermittent in their flow, which is a drawback to the irrigation interests of the state. The preservation of the mountain forests should be encouraged," concluded Mr. Nettleton emphatically.—Denver Tribune-Republican.
